SENSATIONAL ROASTING.

A MEMORABLE DAY IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

Daniel W. Voorhees, of Indiana, and John J. Ingalls, of Kansas, Lambast Each Other Unmercifully to the Delight of a Large Audience-A Disgraceful Scene.

DANIEL W. YOURHERS. WASHINGTON, May 8.—At the conclusion of Mr. Ingails' speech in the senate Mr. Biackburn sent to the desk records to be read in correction of what he said were historical inaccuracies of Mr. Ingails. Mr. Voorhees then rose and began his speech hy applying skillfully the old story of the labor of the mountain and the production of a mouse. He did not regard Mr. Ingniis' speech as a good enough show for the promise in the advertisement. He alluded to the newspaper comment on his-Voorhees'-speech last week, that it has served to galvanize a corpse. The senator from Kantucky had most effectually disposed of the senator from Kansas and it had not been his purpose to antagonize Ingails individually, but he had been brought incidentally in his arraignment of the Republinan party.

The senator from Kansas was like a feeble old gentleman in Indianapolis, who averred that he had been dead for a year and was merely walking around to save funeral expenses. He had galvanized the corpse, but circus. the performance of the dead man had been Touching the report that he had called the Union soldiers "Lincoln dogs," "Lincoln hirelings," and that he had advised them to have iron collars put on their necks, he deciared that was a stale, putrid falsehood, that be had trampled on and stamped out in forty campaigns. It was so base a lie, so infamous a falsehood that the black wail of perdition could produce nothing like it. He kicked it, spurned and despised it, and declared that it was possible for the man who related this lie to become as bad as those who invented it.

These stories raked up by the senator from Kansas had been exploded long ago. Since then he, Voorhees, had been indorsed by the people in Indiana time and time again. He had been elected to the house when the soldiers were home to vote and he had carried the state by large majorities and been repeatedly sent to the sennte. He had never been followed to the doors of the United States senate by an investigating committee. and he had never been whitewashed.

Mr. Voorhees said Mr. Ingalls was mistaken if he supposed he was the central ebject of his speech. "I was raised on a farm," sald Mr. Voorhees, "and I have seen the peacock sit on the barn-yard fence and admire his own feathers and vocalize the neighborhood." The senator from Kansas was not the only bird of beauty on the Republican side.

Mr. Voorhees said he could afford to despise and contemn the reckless charges of the senator from Kansas, who was born with inaccuracy stamped npon him. "If he appeared as my long lost hrother," said Voor hees, "I would strip him and look for the mark of inaccuracy.

The Indiana senator then took up Ingalls' apology for au explanation of his attack on McClellan and Hancock, and declared it to be a miserable afterthought. He quoted from Ingalls' speech when he declared that in 1864 McClelian ran on a platform deciaring to be a failure the war which he had been trying to make a failure for two years. This was an absolute charge of treason against McClellan as a military man. No bitterer charge could have been made even against Benedict Arnold, Mr. Voorhees dwelt on this point, and then proceeded to show how the platform af 1864 had been garbled, and read copious extracts from Mohe was ardently dovoted to the Union cause. He told how the Union soldiers were devoted to McCiellan, how they stood by him and had confidence in him, even after six days of misfortune, which culminated on the seventh day in Malvern Hill, where the Confederates met with an overthrow that was almost fatai to them. He alluded to Ingalls' assertion that the

Democratie candidates for the presidency had been in illicit intercourse with the degraded elements, and said that in a pamphlet copy of his speech the senate had expunged "degraded" and inserted "subpervient". Mr. Voorhees read from Mr. Ingalls' autobiography in the Congressional Directory. He told that the senator from Kansas had been in congress a good many years, and that in each issue of the directory he seemed to have a remarkable memory as to every petty position he had held, but it was only about two years ago that he remembered that he was a "major, lleutenant colonel and judge advocate of volunteers." He was not a man of that military record that justified him in attacking Union geu-

Mr. Ingalls saved the hardest knocks for his second speech. He reserved his documents tili he could draw from Voorhees denials of certain statements. Although the Indianian had most positively denied certain stories, Ingalls was bound to get his documents in. He read an affidavit signed by about a dozen people said to be residents of Indiana, one of them a wommn, to the effect that Voorhees had made the assertion mout "Lincoln dogs," "Lincoln hirelings," etc., as charged. Ingalis read these from newspaper clippings, which were conveniently pasted on white sheets of paper. He intlmated that Voorhees had been a member of the Knights of the Golden Circle, which charge Voorhees immediately denounced as fnise.

Mr. Ingails went through a mass of papers, having collected ail the information about the old story that when Mr. Voorhees vacated his law office in Indiana a lot of treasonable documents were found in it, includlng 120 copies of the ritual of the Knights of the Golden Circle, treasonable communications from Vallandlgham, Jacob Thompson and others; letters pertaining to the purchase of arms for the Confederates, documents about 100,000 men who were to be sent from Indiana in aid of the rebellion, etc. These papers were there taken charge of by Gen. Carrington.

Ingalls said further that Voorbees, in an address to his constituents in 1861, said he would not vote for a dollar or a mnn for the war, "and," added the Kansas senator, "he never did." His, Ingalla, military record bad been obscure, but he at least was always on the side of his country, while the senator from Indiana was against it.

Mr. Voorhees declared that he had voted for every dollar in the war and for every stitch of clothing the Union soldiers wore. He had never issued such an address as the senator from Kansas alluded to, "The man who says otherwise," he continued, "is a falsisier and a slanderer, and I brand him as

The discussion was now approaching a climax, and was of the running descriptiou. Voorhees defended bis record during the war, and said he had been repeatedly indorsed hy the people of Indiana, who had refuted and exploded the oid slanders which hed been hrought up. Ingails said be had been indorsed only by the Democrats of Indiana, and then alluded to the affidnvit about what Voorhees should have said in his speech at Suliivan, and said he was informed that those who made the affidavit were people of veractity, and in an insignating way he seemed to insist that they had spoken the

Voorhees arose from his seat and denounced them as liars, "and," he added, "the senator is a great liar when he repeats what they say, and I pass it back to the scoundrel behind you who instigated the

An Editor and Postmuster Have a Shoot-

ing Match-Roth Dead. NEW ORLEANS, La., May 3.-Gen. Wirt Adams, a prominent citizen of Mississippi and John H. Martin, editor of the New Mississippi, shot each other dead, Tuesday. The quarrel grew out of politics and prohibition and indirectly out of the Gambrell-Hamilton shooting, a year ago. Hamilton has been on trial and was lately acquitted for the murder of Gambreil. The Martin brothers have assailed Hamilton and his friends, prominent among whom was Gen. Adams. Adams was postmaster. He had been prominent in the Confederate army. The shooting occurred at Jackson, Miss., where Adams was postmaster. A witness Cicilan's letter of acceptance, showing that says that he was taiking with Gen. Adams when Martin met him. Adams accosted Martin saying: "You rascal, I have stood enough from you." Martin replied: "If you don't like it"-and simultaneously with the remark he drew a pistol, fired and got behind a large tree half a foot in diameter. Gen. Adams also fired about the same time: but the witness, though not certain, thluks Martin shot first. Martin was a young man and had a hrilliant reputation as un editor. Adams was sixty-nine years old and a native of Kentucky.

Stanley Probably Doad.

LONDON, May 3.-Great fears are entertained that Stanley has succumbed to the war like natives or the climate. A letter from Emin Bey, who is located on the White Nile, and to relieve whom Stanley started, has been heard from, and he says he had heard nothing of Stanley, although he had found that his relief stores had reached Usambiro, near Msiala. The iong siience of Stanley in the wiids of Africa is a strong argumant in favor of his death.

Pennsylvania Prohibitionists. HARRISBURG, Pa., May 8.—About six hundred enthusiastic delegates are in attendance to the state Prohibition convention, which convened in the opera house. After devotional exercises and singing, the regular proceedings of the convention opened with the reading of the call by Chairman Barker, whose appearance upon the stage was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Barker addressed the convention, congratulnting the delegates upon their presence. He caustically referred to the political prophesies made in 1884, and called for the loud applause by his humorous reflection upon all political leaders. He said the Prohibition party was not fighting the Republican nor the Democratic party, hut the saloons that are bringing ruin and desolation upon the innd.

Wooden Nutmeg Democrats. HARTFORD, Conn., May 3.-The Demo-

MINNEAPOLIS Minn., May il. - The Repubiican county convention yesterday declared for Illaine. #### THE EUROPEAN STRUGGLE.

LITTLE GREECE PROPOSES TO START THE BALL A-ROLLING.

Bussian Forces on the Austrian Frontier Increased-Russia Backing Greece-Why France's President Visited Tonion-Fears

For Stanley-Other Foreign News. LONDON, May 8 .- Advices received at the foreign office indicate a probable Greek rising in Macedonia, such a movement being encouraged by Russia, in order to bring about a crisis on the eastern question.

The Montenegrin raid into Servia was connected with the plot. If diplomatio representations by the British minister at Athens do not result in satisfactory assurances, England, Austria and Italy will send a squadron to the Pirseus.

The dispatch might have added that the nprising of the Greeks in the island of Crete against the Turkish government is also a part of the Russian plot. Greece is always at the disposni of Russia for the purpose of disturbing the peace of Europe. It was so in 1853 and prior to the last Turko-Russian war. The supreme idea of little Greece is the extension of her territory at the expense of Turkey. Thessaly, Eplrus and Macedonia, she wants them all, and it is through Russia that she hopes to extend her borders. She is only to eager on the least encouragement from the latter to stir up insurrection among the Greeks within the Turkish frontiers, the line of which at the conclusion of the last war was not settled.

She was kept from attacking Turkey then by the assurance of England that she would gain more by remaining quiet when the time for settlement came. A clause was inserted in the Berlin treaty that formed a basis for the fulfillment of the promise, but it has yet to be fulfilled. This is the most promising war hlossom that has appeared this spring. Russia is using Greece as a whip to thrash Turkey into compliance with Russia's demand that the latter shall by invasion, if necessary, oust Ferdinand from the throne of Bulgaria.

The following dispatch has been received from Athens, Greece: "Instructions have been forwarded to the Greek minister at Constantinople to sever diplomatic relations with the porte and withdraw."

Greece would not take such a step except under protection of an aliiance with Russia. It is reported that Russia is moving additional troops toward the Austrian frontier. This is announced by the German Cologne Gazette and the Vienna papers,

Why Carnot Took the Tour.

LONDON, May 3.—President Carnot is, of course, credited with making his trip to the south of France in the interest of his party and in the hope of creating a boom that may in a measure distract public attention from the Boulangist demonstrations. The presence of the ministers of marine and public works serves to give color to the rumors that the inspection of Toulon and the vessels of the fleet in the vicinity is preliminary to an increase of naval force in the Medlterranean and large expenditures on the works around that important station.

The red carnation is for the moment super-eminent, but the color is an omen of dread to all conservative Frenchmen, one of the most distinguished of whom is reported to have said yesterday with a touch of Galiic hyperbole;

"The lliy and the vlolet have had their dramas: shall this charlatan complete the trilogy with the last tint of the tri-color?
